DESCRIPTION OF EFFORTS
Please describe the types of assistance that your organization has provided to those affected by Hurricane Sandy.	IRC is an international humanitarian assistance organization, providing support to people fleeing conflict and natural disaster in over 40 countries around the world. IRC also provides resettlement assistance to refugees in 15 U.S. cities. IRC maintains programs in Haiti following the 2010 earthquake. One of IRC's refugee resettlement offices is in New York City (with a sub-office in New Jersey). IRC received a minimal amount of donations, $3,578, in response to a hurricane Sandy web page appeal. For Haiti specifically, IRC's web appeal was originally for Hurricane Isaac relief. After Hurricane Sandy, the website was changed to add Sandy relief. The combined Isaac-Sandy web appeal raised approximately $8,380. Apart from the small amount of funds expended for Hurricane Isaac relief in Haiti, these funds will be used solely for Hurricane Sandy relief in Haiti and the U.S. IRC deployed approximately $70,000 in assistance to persons affected by Hurricane Sandy in Haiti (where IRC has existing programs in women's protection, education and health). In New York and New Jersey, IRC staff reached out to refugee clients who may have been affected by Hurricane Sandy. While, thankfully, no clients lost their homes, several were unable to travel to work due to transportation closures. IRC provided approximately $8,000-9,000 in such assistance to clients in New York and New Jersey. In Haiti: As massive relief and recovery efforts forged ahead in the United States in the wake of Hurricane Sandy, IRC focused its emergency efforts in Haiti, which was hammered by Sandy, and where hundreds of thousands of people still living in tent camps are in need of help. Three days of fierce rain and wind flooded and damaged about 100 camps where some 325,000 people still homeless from the 2010 earthquake continued to live. Tents and other makeshift shelters were inundated by water, poorly maintained latrines overflowed, and garbage and waste were widespread. IRC teams surveyed damage in around Port-au-Prince and within 24 hours began distributing emergency supplies to affected families. IRC provided emergency kits with shelter materials and hygiene items to thousands of storm victims. From IRC website, v.rescue.org October 31, 2012. U.S.: From New York to Miami, many refugees served by the IRC's east coast offices have suffered financial loss from Hurricane Sandy. These newly arrived refugees frequently have manufacturing or service industry jobs and receive hourly wages. If they can't get to work, they don't get paid. Disruption of mass transit systems made it impossible for many of them to reach their place of employment. Infrastructure damage and power outages forced employers to close their doors. Loss of nearly a week's pay from an already modest income is an enormous back for families starting over in the United States who have no savings or resources to speak of. To help these families whose income was disrupted, IRC provided cash assistance to help meet monthly expenses. Caseworkers from IRC offices in affected areas reached out to recently resettled refugee families to ensure their safety and to provide financial assistance in the aftermath of the storm.
